

West Coast

The far west of Cumbria has a number of sandy beaches that offer sites for sand dune and salt marsh studies. Around the cliffs south of Whitehaven evidence of erosion and management of longshore drift can be studied. The education centre at Sellafield is located nearby. Although less popular than the central Lake District, this area also provides the opportunity to study tourism impact.

The area is easily accessible with plenty of parking.

