

Buttermere Valley

Set in the tranquil western Lake District, Buttermere includes fine glacial features along with opportunities for soil and river studies. Its popularity with walkers means there are good examples of footpath erosion and management.

Car parking is available.

The area can be accessed via a number of routes, some of which are steep mountain passes.